The stone doorway would have been the only entrance. Inside, the skulls and remains of the ancient ancestors were kept, along with grave goods, in a place of the dead, usually overseen by the clan shaman or seer. They spent their days and nights with the dead, communing and connecting with the past. It is easy to imagine how such figures were seen by their community.

Otherworldly, powerful... magical?

Perhaps even the Baibin myth finds some truth here at Barrow Hill?
